Chapter 6 "Oxidation-Reduction Reactions" thus creating a voltaic cell, which is often called a battery. This section describes the fundamental components of voltaic cells and describes several different types.

Chapter 6 Oxidation-Reduction Reactions - Mark Bishop

Etymology "Redox" is a portmanteau of the words "reduction" and "oxidation". The word oxidation originally implied reaction with oxygen to form an oxide, since dioxygen (O₂(g)) was historically the first recognized oxidizing agent. Later, the term was expanded to encompass oxygen-like substances that accomplished parallel chemical reactions.

Redox - Wikipedia

When methane is oxidized to carbon dioxide its oxidation number changes from -4 to +4. Classical reductions include alkene reduction to alkanes and classical oxidations include oxidation of alcohols to aldehydes. In oxidations electrons are removed and the electron density of a molecule is reduced. In reductions electron density increases when electrons are added to the molecule.

Organic redox reaction - Wikipedia

Oxidation is any chemical reaction that involves the moving of electrons. Specifically, it means the substance that gives away electrons is oxidized. When iron reacts with oxygen it forms a chemical called rust because it has been oxidized (the iron has lost some electrons) and the oxygen has been reduced (the oxygen has gained some electrons).. Oxidation is the opposite of reduction.

Oxidation - Simple English Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

There are two meanings of the term oxidation.. The common (narrow) meaning of oxidation - chemical reaction (combining) between Oxygen and any other element resulting in formation of oxide. For example calcium and oxygen combine forming calcium oxide: $\text{Ca} + 1/2\text{O}_2 = \text{CaO}$ In chemistry the term oxidation has a wider meaning: Oxidation - is a chemical process, in which an element loses one or more ...
